

Stop Press .....We have had a Christmas Baby

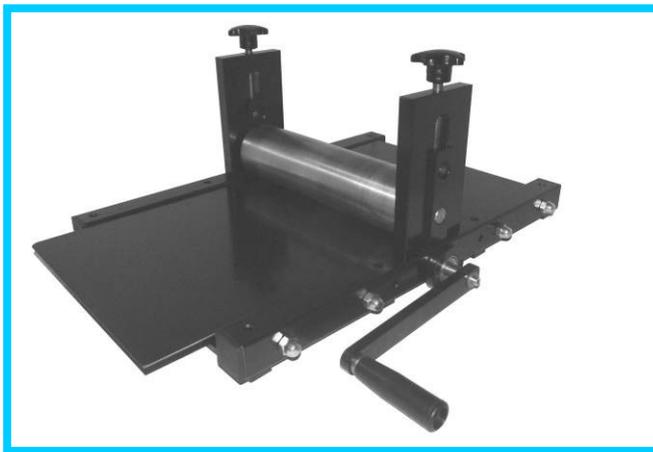

Well, had a very busy month after we returned from the USA but managed to get 3 large commissions completed and framed. Had melt down in handling these large blighters as the glass broke on 'Infinite Bliss' – arms not long enough ! Luckily my framer very kindly replaced the glass and put it back in the frame - kind of scared now. Only two more to complete for this London commission then I suppose it is getting them on site –she seems to have staff ( nice if I had some ) so they can handle them and put them on the walls.

Anyway just to clarify that shocking headline, all is well, I haven't taken leave of my senses, Christmas has come early in our household - the new smaller Printing press called Minor George was collected last week from the manufacturer – we have approved the prototype and they will be delivered to us for Christmas –we already have customers for it.

He is so cute especially when you put it next to the larger Major George.

here it is.....

A4 Minor George

Bed Size 60 x 30cms
Price only £ 535
Blanket set £ 65

This Minor George is an A4 printing press designed after the many requests for a smaller printing press to use in smaller studios and to transport to workshops more easily. In designing the bed size I decided that to call this press an A4 printing press it would refer to the printing plate not the paper. You also need room for the roller to sit at the end of the bed, while you lift the paper off the plate, a design feature not put into other A4 presses on the market, but then this printing press is designed by a professional printmaker, not an engineer who has never been near a printing plate !!!!
